It's OK to Catch Your Teen Doing Something Right

By Jim Fay

Teens can be hard to understand but are they really that bad? Most teens are just trying to find their independence. Here are a few tips from Love and Logic on how to support them. You can find the full article at the link below.

- We should not only see our teens but hear them.
- Focus on what's right, not what is wrong
- Never take away what a teen can do well.
- Treat your teen like a good friend.
- Adopt an open "mind-set"

Put it to Paper: Tips for Parents to Improve a Child's Writing Skills

By Audrey W. Prince, M Ed

Here are some writing activities to help your child get excited to write!

- Send a Message - Frequently leave notes on pillows, desks, mirrors, wherever. Have your child write you a note in return. A family chalkboard or message board is a great tool for encouraging your child to write messages.
- Letters - Make letter writing a habit for your child. Have your child write letters to family and friends.
- Make a Menu - Let your child design and write the menu for a family dinner. This is a great activity that will keep a child busy while mom or dad is cooking. If some of the words are difficult, write them down on a separate sheet of paper for the child to copy.
- Travel log - When you go on vacations, trips, or special outings, have your child record new sights and experiences from his/her journey.
- Copy - If your child likes a particular song, have him/her copy the lyrics. Children can also copy their favorite poem, quotation, or short book. Encourage neatness for legibility.
